FOR IRISH HOME RULE

PLAN SUBMITTED TO PARLIAMENT YESTERDAY.

Enthusiastic Reception of Prime Minister Gladstone in the Commons—His Speech Advocating the Measure a Masterly Composition.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The scenes at the opening of Parliament to-day, upon the occasion of the beginning of the real fight for Irish home rule, will long be remembered. While Mr. Gladstone yet slept the palace yard was crowded with members and throngs of people eagerly awaiting the opening of the Commons. The early arrivals were those prominent in the Irish cause. Among them were P. J. Foley, member for Connemara; David Sheehy, Secretary of the Irish National Federation; John Roche, Nationalist member for East Galway; and Dr. Charles Tanner, member for Cork. By 10 o'clock sixty members were at the doors awaiting admission. The inner lobby was packed with members at noon, and when the doors were opened the members threw aside their dignity and rushed in a disorderly fashion for seats, shouting and struggling for the best places. Many were thrown violently to the floor and bruised and trampled upon. The veteran Caleb Wright, member for southwest Lancashire, 83 years of age, fell in the crush and was severely injured, being knocked down and trampled on. He was rescued by John Burns with difficulty. Not a few members became angry, and there were several sharp fights at various points. All were finally seated and eager for the feast of Gladstonean eloquence.

Mr. Gladstone entered the House of Commons at 3:30. Every liberal and Irish Nationalist stood up and greeted him with prolonged and enthusiastic cheers. When Mr. Gladstone arose to introduce the home rule bill there was another demonstration so enthusiastic and irrepressible that it was several minutes before he could be heard.

Mr. Gladstone spoke as follows in a clear, strong and resonant voice: "I may, without impropriety, remind the House that the voices which have usually pleaded the cause of Irish self-government in Irish affairs within these walls have during the last seven years been almost entirely mute. I fear, therefore, to the period of 1860, when a proposition of this kind was submitted on the part of the government of the day, and beg to remind the House of the position then taken by all the promoters of these measures. We said that we had arrived at a point in our transactions with Ireland where the two roads parted. You have, we said, to choose one or the other. One is the way of Irish autonomy according to instructions I have just referred to; the other is the way of coercion. That is our contention. It will be the recollection of the House that that contention was most stoutly and largely denied. It was said over and over again by many members opposite: 'We are not coercionists; we do not adopt that alternative, and neither can we adopt it.' [Ministerial cheers.] That assertion of theirs was undoubtedly sustained by the proposals, especially from the dissentient Liberals, of various plans dealing with Irish affairs. Those plans, though they fell entirely short in principle and in scope of Irish self-government, yet were of no trivial or mean importance. They went far beyond what has heretofore been usually proposed in the way of local self-government for Ireland.

Well, what has been the result of the dilemma as it was then put forward on this side of the house and repelled by the other? Has our contention that the choice law between autonomy and coercion been justified or not? [Liberal cheers.] What has become of each and all of those important schemes for giving Ireland self-government in the provinces and giving her even a central establishment in Dublin with limited powers? All vanished into thin air. But the reality remains. The roads were still autonomy or coercion. The choice lay between them, and the choice was to repel autonomy and embrace coercion. You cannot always follow coercion in an absolutely uniform method. In 1880, for the first time, coercion was imposed on Ireland in the shape of a permanent law added to the statute book. This state of things constituted an offering against the harmony and traditions of self-government. It was a distinct and violent breach of the promise on the face of which union was obtained. That permanent system of repression inflicted upon the country a state of things which could not continue to exist. It was impossible to bring these inhabitants of the country under coercion into sympathy with the coercion power.

Mr. Gladstone proceeded to dilate at length upon the circumstances under which the act of union was passed, the promise of equality in the laws and of commercial equality under which union was effected. He said: "It was then prophesied confidently that Irishmen would take their places in the Cabinet of the United Kingdom, but it had been an honored destiny to sit in Cabinets with no less than sixty or seventy statesmen of whom only one, the Duke of Wellington, was an Irishman, while Castlereagh is the only other Irishman who has sat in the Cabinet since union. Pitt promised equal laws when the union was formed, but the broken promises made to Ireland are unhappily written in indelible characters in the history of the country. Coming to 1832, when the resurrection of the people began, and thence down to 1880, Ireland can present only a small minority in favor of restoring to her something in the nature of constitutional rights and practical self-government. It is to me astonishing that so little weight is attached by many to the fact that before 1880—before 1885 indeed—Irish wishes of self-government were represented only by a small minority. Since 1885, when the wide extension of the franchise was protected by the secret ballot, Ireland's position has been improved in Parliament. In 1888 there were eighty-five nationalists, or more than five-eighths [Cheers.] They have been reduced from eighty-five to eighty under circumstances somewhat peculiar. [Hear, hear.] I must own frankly to myself among others, for reasons totally and absolutely unintelligible. [Loud cheers.]

HUGH O'DONNELL ON TRIAL.

The Work of Impaneling a Jury Begun at Pittsburgh—Court Room Crowded. PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 14.—The case of Hugh O'Donnell, the first chairman of Homestead's famous advisory board, was called for trial before Judge Stowe this morning. O'Donnell is charged with murder during the riot of July 6. The court room was packed long before the officers made their appearance. O'Donnell stood while the indictment, charging him with the murder of T. J. Conners, a Pinkerton, the same upon which Clifford and Crichtlow were tried, was read to him. In response to the usual question, O'Donnell replied firmly: "Not guilty." After the preliminary details were disposed of the work of empaneling a jury was begun and will probably consume the greater part of to-day's sessions of court. O'Donnell will be defended by Messrs. Anderson of Youngstown, O'Brien of St. Paul, Paul, Brennan, Marshall, Beardon, Cox and Montooth of Pittsburgh.

World's Fair Souvenir Coins—

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.

As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.

Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed among 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.

Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks.
